MEMORANDUM FOR: Executive Director-ComptrollerSUBJECT : Proposed "Day at CIA" Schedule for the Senior Seminar on Foreign Policy

1. This memorandum suggests action on the part of the Executive Director-Comptroller; this action is contained in paragraph 5.

2. In early December, 1968 Ambassador G. Lewis Jones, Coordinator of the Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy, confirmed the date of 5 May 1969 for the "Day at CIA." The Ambassador's letter to the Director, enclosing biographies of the 24 students and a Foreign Service Institute brochure about the Seminar program, is attached as Tab A.

3. Details of the one-day program have been informally discussed with [redacted] Agency students attending the current 11th session. Messrs. [redacted] urged that the NIE film, not hitherto available for Senior Seminar groups, be added to the program. Mr. Hugh Cunningham, incoming Director of Training, will be available to answer queries about the film, the Board of National Estimates, and the estimative process. [redacted] also recommended that because the Agency students will be responsible for briefing fellow members on CIA's role and organizational structure, the welcoming talk stress the role of the Director. Inclusion of the film/discussion (approximately one hour) is made possible by the omission of time previously devoted to CIA's role and organization and by dropping the Support presentation, which was introduced last year. Other speakers, topics, and time allocations of the Proposed Program (Tab B) substantially coincide with last year's offerings.

4. Our representatives hope that the Executive Director-Comptroller, the D/DCI/NIFE and the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence will be available for the luncheon, along with the four line Deputies. Other Agency participants in the "Day at CIA" and Agency alumni of the Senior Seminar will be asked to attend the luncheon.

5. In view of the Seminar's continuing importance and of the suggestions made by our student representatives, I recommend that the Proposed Program for the visit of the Senior Seminar to CIA on Monday, 5 May, be approved.

SENIOR SEMINAR IN FOREIGN POLICY

FOREIGN SERVICE INSTITUTE

WASHINGTON

December 6, 1968

Honorable Richard Helms
The Director of Central Intelligence
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Dick:

Following informal consultation with you, I marked out May 5, 1969 to be the "Day at CIA" for the Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy of 1968-69. You have been kind enough to receive previous Seminars and I hope you will be able to do the same thing for the Eleventh.

May 5 is some distance away and, if necessary, a change can be made, but now I have a date for planning purposes. The details of our visit can be worked out between your office and mine closer to the time.

As of possible personal interest to you, I enclose biographies of the 24 Members of the Seminar of 1968-69 and an illustrated brochure.

With every good wish for the holiday season and 1969,

Yours ever,

SENIOR SEMINAR IN FOREIGN POLICY

Department of State

1968-1969 Session
August 19, 1968 - June 13, 1969

DESCRIPTION AND OUTLINE

Objective and Scope

The Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy is the most advanced educational program in the field of international relations and foreign policy offered by the Department of State. Its purpose is to assist in the preparation of officers for positions of high responsibility. The Seminar provides an intellectual framework for a free and vigorous inquiry into some of the complexities of foreign policy and US domestic problems. It aims to broaden and deepen the thinking of its Members with regard to domestic and foreign affairs. It seeks to stimulate their creative powers and to enhance their capacity to make thoughtful judgments.

The Senior Seminar is a select group of about 25 officers from the principal agencies of the Government concerned with the conduct of US foreign relations. In the Seminar of 1967-68, thirteen were Foreign Service Officers of Classes 1 and 2. The remainder came from the following agencies: two from AID, two from USIA and one each from CIA, Commerce, Agriculture, Defense, USAF, USN, USA and the Marine Corps.

The Seminar requires the full time of its Members and lasts ten months.

Plan of Study

The Seminar relies heavily on reading and research by the Members, stimulated by discussions with outstanding authorities in relevant fields. Guest speakers in the past have included Members of Congress, officials of the federal executive and of local governments, university professors, military leaders and experts in business, education, industry, labor, religion, arts, sciences and public affairs.

Discussions, reading, documentary films, and oral and written reports are supplemented by individual and group attendance at meetings of professional associations and research organizations; by visits to the United Nations and to military and industrial installations. Field trips in the United States give the Members first-hand knowledge regarding some of the political, economic and social problems of various regions of the country. The Seminar of 1967-68 performed over 22,000 miles of group travel within the United States.

Course Content

Because the average age of the Members is about 46 and their average length of government service is 22 years, the Seminar is able to range fast and far in its studies. It assumes, particularly in the field of foreign relations, that the Members already possess a considerable body of first-hand knowledge.

The Seminar begins with a series of organizational and introductory meetings. This is followed by a full week devoted to the history of the American people--social, economic, ethnic, political and diplomatic. This important series lays the foundation for studies to follow.

The Seminar attempts to expose its Members to the latest developments world-wide in science, arts, communications, space, atomic energy, industry, commerce, agriculture, labor, education, transportation, the communist threat and counterinsurgency, the poverty program, the Peace Corps, race relations, city-state-federal relationships, automation, computers, and systems and functional analysis. In doing so, it reminds the Members of much knowledge acquired in the past but about which they had not thought seriously for some time. The Seminar encourages copious reading and give-and-take discussion in both large and small groups. In the true Seminar tradition, Members are expected to impart knowledge as well as to acquire it.

To the extent possible speakers appearing at the Seminar are keyed to the Seminar's travel plans: thus the Seminar concentrates before visiting the United Nations on "International Relations: Institutions and Concepts." Before visiting military and naval establishments and before visiting industrial installations, the Members will have heard presentations by the Chiefs of Staff of the armed services, manpower experts, and distinguished economists in a position to deal with the military and economic power of the United States.

Experience has shown the desirability of avoiding overcompartmentalization of the study program.

Individual Travel and Case Studies

Approximately three weeks are provided during February and March for Members to perform individual field travel in connection with research on foreign policy topics, or domestic issues, selected by them in consultation with the Seminar's Coordinator. Members are given considerable scope with regard to the subject of their Case Studies and the countries or places they wish to visit, but Members are counseled to explore topics and areas of the world wholly new to them. On returning from individual travel, Members are required to make a formal oral presentation to the Seminar and to lead a round-table discussion of their topic. The Coordinator on these occasions usually invites special guests and alumni. The 1967-68 Seminar confined its travel to the USA because of the balance of payments problem.

The Seminar's Corporate Character

Past Seminars have demonstrated that individual Members can contribute greatly to the Seminar's activities through personal contacts and specialized knowledge: thus an effort is made to avoid rigidity in scheduling events.

Ambassador-of-the-Week Program

When the Seminar is in Washington, certain American Ambassadors returning for consultation and/or leave are invited to speak; certain Ambassadors of foreign countries located in Washington are similarly invited to make presentations, when their areas are being studied. In each instance, time is provided for Members' questions.

SENIOR SEMINAR IN FOREIGN POLICY

Department of State

Eleventh Session
August 19, 1968 - June 13, 1969

BASIC INFORMATION FOR SPEAKERS

The Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy, held annually since 1958, is the most advanced educational program in international relations and foreign policy offered in the United States Government. Each ten months' session, from August to the following June, occupies the full time of its 24 Members. Usually one half of these are from the upper ranks (FSO-1s and FSO-2s) of the American Foreign Service, many of whom will be assigned, upon completion of the course, to the field either as Chiefs of Mission or Deputy Chiefs of Mission. Other Members in the Seminar are officers of comparable standing in the armed services, the Defense Department and in civilian departments such as Commerce, Agriculture, USIA, GAO and AID. Membership in the Seminar is awarded on the basis of excellence of performance and potential for future leadership. The average age of Members is forty-six and their length of Government service averages twenty-one years.

STATUS OF INFORMATION GIVEN TO SEMINAR:

Remarks made by a speaker, whether or not he is employed by the United States Government, are never quoted or attributed. Traditionally, the discussions and interchange of ideas are considered privileged. Normally, no outside guests are invited, but if so, the speaker's permission is obtained in advance. No reporters or representatives of the press are ever present. All Members are cleared for classified information up to, and including Top Secret.

PROCEDURE:

The procedure is that of a seminar. There is an opening talk or statement beginning at 9:30 a.m. followed by a discussion. The presentation, which need not be a formal lecture, usually lasts about an hour and sets the frame for a discussion of an hour or more following a coffee break. Most speakers remain seated. One of the Members acts as chairman of the day and coordinates questions. Another serves as an intra-Seminar rapporteur.

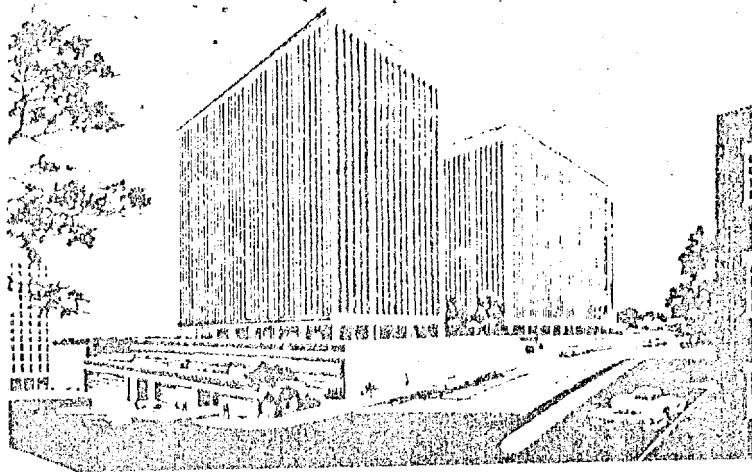

LOCATION:

The Seminar occupies part of the twelfth floor of the Department of State's Foreign Service Institute (State Annex No. 3) at 1400 Key Boulevard, Arlington, Virginia (see attached map). As this map shows, this address is not in the Arlington Towers complex where the National Interdepartmental Seminar and the Viet Nam Training Center are located. The Foreign Service Institute is ten minutes from the main building of the Department of State and twenty minutes' drive from National Airport. The Seminar is unable to provide transportation for speakers, but a free shuttle bus service operates every thirty minutes between Main State and the Foreign Service Institute.

PARKING:

Parking space is available in the building for speakers who drive their own cars. The parking areas marked "C" or "D" level are on the Nash Street side of the Foreign Service Institute. Speakers should tell the attendant that they will be speaking to the Senior Seminar. They will be given a special visitors parking ticket, half of which should be placed on the car. The other half should be turned in at the Senior Seminar, and will be signed and returned to the speakers. The speaker will present this signed ticket to the attendant upon departure from the parking area.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE

An Advanced Training Program

The Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy, held annually since 1958, is a component of the Foreign Service Institute, Department of State. The Senior Seminar is the most advanced program of studies in international relations and foreign policy offered by any agency of the United States Government. Each session, which lasts from August to June, is limited to an honor group of about 25 senior officials. Half of these are career officers of the American Foreign Service, who are being trained for important field assignments such as Chiefs of Mission or Deputy Chiefs of Mission and comparable posts in the Department of State. The other half are officers possessing an equal degree of achievement and length of service, nominated by the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and other U.S. Government Departments and Agencies in Washington.

The average age of Members is in the mid-40's. Their average length of U.S. Government service is 23 years.

Membership in the Seminar is awarded on the basis of excellence of performance, demonstrated leadership and potential for the assumption of greater responsibilities.

AN OBJECTIVE: Updating knowledge of the USA

In addition to reviewing foreign policy problems, an important phase of the Seminar's study program is designed to bring up-to-date the Membership's knowledge of the latest social, economic, scientific and industrial developments in the USA. Officers serving the United States abroad do their best to keep up with the dynamic changes taking place in this country, but they can represent the United States better if they possess recent, first-hand experience, acquired while listening on the spot to the views of eminent educators, industrialists, scientists, business and labor leaders, social workers, governors, mayors and law enforcement authorities. During their ten months of study, Members also perform individual travel to the regions of the world in which they have a special interest and prepare, as a result of their travel, case studies and reports useful to the Agencies of the U.S. Government.
